Senatorial Good Looks-Some of the Characteristics of the Graye Seignors.

[From the Chiengo Inter-Ocean.] Recent letters from South Carolina announce the rapid recovery of Gov. flampton, and his intention of visiting Washington as soon as he is able to travel. He will bring with him his daughter, who is described as possess-ing musual beauty, and whose advent in society here is expected to be quite a sensation. She is about twen-ty years old, and just from school. The Governor himself is a large, well-framed man, with a face that is somewhat striking in its tout-ensemble, if that is a proper thing to say, but his features are irregular, and his skin is coarse. When he comes here South Carolina will be represented by better looking men in the Senate than any other State, as Hamburg Butler is a very handsome man. He has ugly eyes, however—cold; cruet, and sulky

The Rothchilds and Astors.

It is somewhat curious that the founders of the two families which stand at the lead of the wealth of Europe and America were both Ger-mans, born within eighty miles of each other—the one, Rothchild, at Frankfort-or-the-Main; the other, Astor, at Wildorf, a small village near Heidelzserg, in the Duchy of Baden. Twenty-five years ago the late Baron Junes de Rothchild said to an American gentleman, still alive, and now in this city, that he believed the Astor fortune to be the largest accumulation of private wealth then known in the world. Old John Jacob Astor, the founder of the fortthe, had then been dead som four or five years—he died in 1848—and his son, the late William B. Astor, administered the astor estates.

Twenty years, however, made a great difference in the relative value of the Astor and Rothchild fortunes. Baron James de Rothchild, of Paris, at the time of his death left a fortune of two hundred million dollars, while that of the late William B. Astor, who died in November, 1875, was dred million dollars. While the fortune of the late William B. Astor represented the sum total of the Astor wealth, that of the late Baron James You often see Burnside's form and face in the fashion plates in tailor of the Rothchild family, among stores, alongside of the Marquis of Lorne, and he is a man of the appearance. Savings for Old Age.

No one denies that it is wise to make provision for old age, but we are not all agreed as to the kind of provision it is best to lay in. Cersent-mate, and saying, "Now, mum, tainly we shall want a little money with respect to this boy."

Garland, of Arkansas, looks like sorry sight; yes, save money by all sorry sight; yes, save money by all means. But an old man needs just that particular kind of strength which young men are most apt to waste. Many a foolish young fellow will throw away on a holiday a certain amount of nervous energy which he will never feel the want of until he is 70, and then how much he will want it! It is curious, but true, that a bot lle of champaign at 20 will intensify the rheumatism at three-score. It is teen necessitates the aid of specta-cles at 40 instead of 60. We advise our young readers to be saving of health for their old age, for the maxim holds good in regard to health as to money-"waste not want not." It be son, there is nothing so important is the greatest mistake to suppose that yiolation of the laws of health can escape its penalty.
